About the Office for National Statistics

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is the government agency responsible for compiling, analysing and disseminating many of the United Kingdom's economic, social and demographic statistics, including the retail prices index, trade figures and labour market data, as well as the periodic census of the population and health statistics. It is also the agency that administers the statutory registration of births, marriages and deaths. The Director of ONS is the National Statistician and the Registrar General for England and Wales.

A National Statistics publication

National Statistics are produced to high professional standards set out in the National Statistics Code of Practice. They undergo regular quality assurance reviews to ensure that they meet customer needs. They are produced free from any political interference.

Foreword

The Census of Population conducted every ten years is a fundamental source of information about the number, distribution and condition of the population of England and Wales. The information is obtained about the entire population at one time and all citizens have a legal obligation to respond.

This publication is the first report from the 2001 Census of Population for England and Wales. It provides a snapshot of the resident population on Census Day, 29 April 2001. The results give population totals at national and local authority levels, by age and sex.

Information from our regular censuses underpin and make an essential contribution to public policy and to service provision, in both the public and the private sector. The population counts from this latest census will form the basis for key decisions over the next ten years.

The success of the 2001 Census has been made possible by the co-operation of members of the public who complete the Census forms; by the hard work of the Census field-staff who deliver and collect them; and by the assistance of many other people and organisations with all aspects of the operation. I would like to thank everyone who has contributed to the 2001 Census, particularly the citizens of England and Wales, who have helped make this the best census result ever.

Len Cook

Registrar General for England and Wales

Introduction

This publication is the first report from the 2001 Census of Population for England and Wales. It provides information on the resident population, split by age and sex, for England and Wales and constituent Local Authority Districts and Unitary Authorities, as at Census Day, 29 April 2001. This report is in accordance with the provisions of the Census Act 1920 and, as a statutory report, therefore relates only to the conduct of the Census in England and Wales. In order to provide information to Parliament it also includes information on Scotland, Northern Ireland and the UK as a whole. This information is drawn from the reports laid before the Scottish Parliament and Northern Ireland Assembly in accordance with the statutory provisions of those administrations.

This report has also been made available on the National Statistics website www.statistics.gov.uk, where there is supplementary information. This includes commentary on changes in the populations of England and Wales between 1951 and 2001, and figures for each local authority in England and Wales on the response achieved by the 2001 Census. More information on other results from the Census is available in the Census Outputs Prospectus, also on the National Statistics website.

The information is presented in a similar format to the Mid-2001 Population Estimates being published by the Office for National Statistics on 10 October 2002. The Mid-2001 Population Estimates will be based on the results of the 2001 Census, but as they relate to 30 June 2001 they allow for births, deaths and migration between Census Day and the middle of the year.

Results from the Census are made possible by the co-operation of members of the public in responding to the Census; by the hard work of the Census field-staff in delivering and collecting forms; and by the assistance of many other people and organisations throughout all aspects of the Census. The Registrar General would like to thank all those who have contributed to the Census.

Conduct of the Census

Results from the 2001 Census relate to Census Day, 29 April 2001. The Census placed a legal obligation on every household in which someone was usually resident on Census Day, and on every person who was a usual resident of a communal establishment, to complete a census form. These forms were returned by post or collected by a Census Enumerator.

As no census succeeds in counting everyone, an independent Census Coverage Survey (CCS) was carried out during May and June 2001 in a sample of small areas throughout England and Wales. The results of the CCS were combined with the data collected from the Census to estimate and adjust for the number of households and people not counted by the census. The figures presented here, as with all results of the 2001 Census, have been adjusted to allow for estimated underenumeration. The process of estimating and adjusting for underenumeration is known as the One Number Census. Further information is available on the National Statistics website at www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001. Information on the extent of these adjustments is also available on the website.

Population Base

The tables in this Report relate to the usually resident population as at Census Day. Students are recorded at their term-time address. In contrast to the 1991 Census, information on visitors was not collected.

Comparability with Results of the 1991 Census

The Census is designed to provide the most accurate possible picture of the population on the day the Census is taken. Comparisons of the results contained in this Report with results from the 1991 Census will be affected by changes in the geographic boundaries of local authorities; changes in definition of the resident population; and that for results from the 2001 Census, adjustments have been made for estimated underenumeration. Information on the extent of these adjustments is available on the National Statistics website.

Comparability with the Final Results of the 2001 Census

Subsequent results from the 2001 Census may differ very slightly from those shown in this Report. Further information is available on the National Statistics website.

Confidentiality

The Registrar General has a legal obligation not to reveal information collected in confidence in the Census about individual people and households. The confidentiality of all census results, including the counts in this report, is protected by a combination of a variety of 'disclosure protection' measures.

Further Information

More detailed results from the 2001 Census will be published during 2003. These will include results for the full range of topics covered by the Census for a range of administrative areas and others in common use. Supporting information on the Census, including definitions of Census terms; information about the One Number Census and Census response; and evaluation of the conduct of the Census, is also being published.
